

It's time to join the ...
Georgia Association of Natural Resource
Extension Professionals

The Association of Natural Resource Extension Professionals (ANREP) provides a peer-to-peer forum for members to network, innovate and collaborate while advancing the professional status and recognition of our unique role as educators in the field of natural resources.

Georgia ANREP chapter membership is open to any University of Georgia or Fort Valley State University employee working in natural resources – Extension professionals from any discipline, academic or public service and outreach faculty and staff, etc. Led by a Board of Directors, Georgia ANREP aims to offer high-quality professional learning and networking opportunities for its membership throughout the state. A multi-day annual conference each spring features guest speakers, hands-on field trips and tours, and the opportunity to share scholarly work. Additionally, the chapter publishes quarterly newsletters where members can showcase their programming and publications.
